Port Allen Elementary School found the perfect cure for this very mild winter season we're having.

The school trucked in snow for a big snowball fight.

The Port Allen Library has community family time once a week.

85 families in attendance meant 240 snowball runners and throwers in action.

They were kind to the little kids, but they wailed on the teachers.

The joy on the faces of the kids when the teachers run through again and again is amazing.

They appear to realize what fun it is for the children and they like treating them.

After all the chilliness, everyone was invited inside for a warm gumbo dinner.

It was a great night at Port Allen Elementary thanks to the good folks at the West Baton Rouge Library.
